Statement from Lundberg Family Farms

Lundberg Family Farms stands behind the safety, nutritional value and health benefits of all our rice products. We are proud of our 75 year history of producing the finest quality rice and rice products as well as our commitment to organic and sustainable farming.

As we look into the findings of the study released on 2/16/12, we will consider all of the published research on the overall safety and healthfulness of organic rice products. It is important to remember that U.S. grown rice has been a wholesome source of nutrition, both here at home and internationally, for over 300 years. Because arsenic is naturally occurring, some levels are present in all rice, and a wide range of fruits, vegetables, grains and seafood, as well as present in the air and drinking water.

At present, there are no requirements for testing arsenic levels in a wide range of food products grown in the U.S., including rice. We favor additional and more extensive scientific research as well as an evaluation by the U.S. FDA regarding the appropriate amounts in food.

You can also visit www.usarice.com for further information on the study.
